

Drew Johnson

Drew has spent 40 years in the energy industry, the latter 20 years focussed on energy efficiency and carbon reduction including developing new technologies and services. Drew was one of the founders of Eaga plc, a UK based international energy efficiency business employing c5,000 staff. Drew led a business development programme which culminated in Eaga's flotation on the London Stock Exchange in 2007 at a valuation of c£450 million. Drew then became CEO and led the further development of the business prior to its sale in 2011. Drew has a wealth of experience, together with extensive private sector and government contacts in the renewables and wider energy space in both the UK and abroad (including Europe, North America and Asia). Since the sale of Eaga, Drew has invested in a number of early stage innovative companies, including Big Solar Limited who are developing disruptive energy generation and energy storage technologies.