

Energy Transitions Commission India Launch at World Sustainable Development Summit and Stakeholder Meeting

India Habitat Centre, Lodhi Road
February 15th & 13th 2018

Introduction and Rationale

Electricity systems globally are undergoing a significant and in places disruptive transition, driven by a wave of technology innovation across energy and non-energy technologies. Navigating this changing landscape is a big challenge for both firms and governments.

To help firms, policy-makers, regulators, and system operators navigate and shape this transition in India, The Energy and Resources Institute (TERI) is convening the Energy Transitions Commission India (ETC India), to be formally launched at TERI's World Sustainable Development Summit (WSDS) on the 15th of February 2018.

ETC India is a unique, high-level, multi-stakeholder platform on energy and electricity sector transition in India. TERI is convening the ETC India in collaboration with three international institutions:

- The National Renewable Energy Laboratory (NREL), United States
- Climate Policy Initiative (CPI), United States
- The Energy Transitions Commission International (ETC International), United Kingdom

Membership of the platform will come from the private sector, public sector, academia and civil society. The deliberations of the platform will shape a detailed research and engagement agenda, intended to support policy and strategy decisions in the years to come.

Invitation to participate in the ETC Launch on 15th Feb 2018.

The ETC India is being launched on the 15th Feb, 2018 at the World Sustainable Development Summit. The event will see a discussion on the key opportunities and challenges facing the Indian electricity sector in the coming 5-10 years. Your personal presence at this event will make this a very healthy debate and an illustrious launch.

Invitation for your representative to participate in the ETC India Stakeholder's Event on the 13th Feb 2018.

The first meeting of key stakeholders and representatives for the ETC India will be held on the 13th of February, 2018. ETC India is a stakeholder-led initiative, hence it is important that its scope and objectives be decided in conjunction with the stakeholders. Please find overleaf the draft program for these two events.
