

'India committed to environment'

New Delhi: Stressing on India's long-standing demand for finance and technology from developed nations to tackle climate change, PM Narendra Modi on Friday said "successful climate action needs access to financial resources and technology" and that technology can help countries like India develop sustainably. "We are proud of our long history and tradition of harmonious co-existence between man and nature. Respect for nature is an integral part of our value system. Our traditional practices contribute to a sustainable lifestyle," Modi said the World Sustainable Development Summit.
