MESSAGE

I am happy to learn that The Energy and Resources Institute – TERI – is organizing the Delhi Sustainable Development Summit (DSDS) – 2015 on the theme “Sustainable Development Goals and Dealing with Climate Change.”

In order to be effective, our efforts at poverty eradication and sustainable development must take into account the challenges posed by climate change. I am of the firm opinion that India should view the current global focus on climate change as an opportunity to decisively change the quality of life of its citizens.

We should also work towards a shift on emphasis from “carbon credit” to “green credit”, which takes into account initiatives towards clean energy generation, energy conservation and energy efficiency.

I hope the deliberations of the DSDS will lead to fruitful and productive outcomes. I wish the organizers and participants all success

(Narendra Modi)
