

Dipak Dasgupta

Dipak Dasgupta is an international economist with expertise in climate change, finance, agriculture, and macroeconomic policy. He is an expert to UN agencies, World Bank, and other national and international financial institutions, research networks and clean technology companies, and is on the Advisory Board of the Imperial College Business School on climate finance.

He was until recently founding Board Member of the Green Climate Fund (GCF), the largest specialized global climate change finance institution, representing India and the Asia-Pacific, and chair-facilitator of its Investment Committee. He was also a member of India's negotiating team on climate finance at the UNFCCC negotiations from 2011 to 2015. He is former Principal Economic Adviser to the Ministry of Finance, Government of India. He also established and headed the Climate Change Finance Unit at the Ministry.